Nigeria Cutting Price of Its Oil $5.50 a Barrel

By Bamaby J. Feder New York Times Service

LONDON - Nigeria has cut the price of its crude oil by $5.50 a barrel following reductions of North Sea oil prices by Britain and Nor-

Coming more quickly than expected, Nigeria's reduction, announced Saturday, is the first break in the official pricing structure of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries. Analysis and industry sources

ers to join the downward trend. The question banging over the oil market and the banks that have loans to oil producers is where this chain reaction will end and whether the oil cartel will survive

"Nigeria's move was anticipated," said an oil company spokes-man who asked not to be identified. Now we will all have to sit back and see what OPEC does as a

The decline in oil prices has come after months of weak demand resulting from recession, emservation measures and, most recently, a mild winter.

Price cus became inevitable when OPEC failed to agree on output restrictions at a meeting in Geneva last month, thus guaranteeing that oil would continue to flood the market. That made the prices set in times when supplies were harder to come by unsustainable.

Prices on the spot market had already fallen to between $4 and $6 a barrel below official prices, and an increasing oumber of oil companies were turning down crude from producers who insisted on posted No one knows how far prices will have to fell to reach the point where demand for oil will equal supply, but there is widespread fear that a sudden, steep drop could oc-cur if OPEC failed to regroup and impose pricing and production discipline on its members. Such a drop would have serious consequences for oil-producing nations such as Nigeria and Mexico and would put strains on the international banking system, according to many economists.

Gulf Countries

MANAMA, Bahrain — Saudi Arabia and its Gulf allies held discussions Sunday night in Riyadh on how they should respond to the fall in world oil prices.

Foreign ministers of the Gulf Cooperation Council, holding a second day of talks, focused on the threat to OPEC unity posed by the Nigerian price cut, officials said. "The war begins," said a senior OPEC official in the Gulf. "It is very dangerous." Saudi Arabia has seen its production slip to what industry experts estimate as less than four million barrels daily from a peak in 1979 of about 10 million. It bas tried to defend the official OPEC reference price of $34 a barrel.

Analysts say that a reduction of even $4 a barrel would do little to revive demand for Saudi crude. A arger cut would mean a risk of retaliation by Nigeria and a full-scale price war, they said.

The other members of the Gulf Cooperation Council - Kuwait, Qatar, the United Arab Emirates, Oman and Bahrain - are expected to go aloog with any Saudi move.

adviser on petroleum and energy, according to reports from Lagos. Mr. Dikko is also the current chairman of OPEC. He reportedly said that Nigeria remained committed to the cartel but that it was clear that OPEC's pricing structure, which is based on a price of $34 a barrel for Saudi light crude oil, was no longer a basis for the world market.

Nigeria's cut to $30 will bring its Bonny light crude oil into line with the $30.50-a-barrel price proposed Friday for North Sea crude oils by the British National Oil Corp. Nigerian and the North Sea fields produce comparable oils with a low sulfur content. Three Filipino priests are still in detention. A number of others are being sought for allegedly joining the communist New People's Army guerrillas, who have been waging an expanding insurgency in various parts of the archipelago.

Among these rebel clerics, the Defense Ministry said, is the Rev. Conrado Balweg, a parish priest and high school principal. In Octo-ber, the ministry identified him as the leader of a New People's Army unit that killed seven government troops in a September 1980 attack.

After the priest was shown in a British Broadcasting Corp. documentary wearing fatigues and Archbishop Antonio Mabutas, brandishing an M-16 rifle, Defense president of the hishops' confer-Minister Juan Ponce Enrile approved rewards of 130,000 pesos (about $15,000) each for the capture dead or alive of Father Balweg and another priest, the Rev. Zacarias Agatep, who was accused of procuring weapons and ammunition for guerrillas.

A day after the rewards were announced, Father Agatep was killed in what the authorities described as a shont-out with government troops in Ilocos Sur Province.

Just over two weeks ago, the military accused Father Balweg and another priest, the Rev. Bruno Ortega, of planning an attack Jan. 9 on a police base by about 60 New People's Army guerrillas in which a local militiaman was killed and a police sergeant was kidnapped and publicly murdered.

Recent Decline Seen By Arens in Relations Between U.S., Israel

By Bernard Gwertzman New York Tanes Service

WASHINGTON - Moshe Arens, who is replacing Ariel Sharon as Israel's defense minister, says that Israeli-American relations have worsened in recent months. partly because of the Reagan administration's attitude toward talks

Mr. Arens said that in part this is because some American officials have "idealized notions" about how quickly a negotiated solution can be achieved in Lebanon.

In his first interview since being named to the Cabinet last Monday, Mr. Arens said Friday that the United States had benefited from Israeli military gains in Lebanon last summer. But, he added, "You have got some people in the admin-istration who would like to pick up the dividends and kick us in the teeth at the same time."

He said: "I think most people in the United States know and feel that the Israeli military operation had brought about a major geopo-litical change and the United States was the primary beneficiary

PLO Contact With Cairo to Be Permitted

Compiled by Our Staff From Dispatches ALGIERS — The new executive committee that will be selected at the 10-day session of the Palestine Liberation Organization's parlia-ment-in-exile will be authorized to maintain contacts with Egypt, a PLO spokesman said Sunday

The idea of maintaining contacts with President Hosni Mubarak's government in Egypt came under strong attack from PLO hard-liners during debates of the policy-mak-ing Palestinian National Council.

The new executive committee, which will be chaired by Yasser Arafat, "will be authorized to con-tinue official discussions with Egypt," the spokesman said.

Any meeting between Mr. Arafat and Mr. Mubarak will depend on those contacts and could not take place on the basis of the Camp David agreements between Egypt and Israel, he said.

The spokesman said that Mr. Arafat's el-Fatah movement, the PLO's principal group, was satis-fied with the resignation of Issam Sartawi, a PLO moderate, from the congress Sunday.

He said Mr. Sartawi had not been authorized by Fatah to call, in an interview with The Washington Post this mouth, for the PLO to

U.S. Pension Experts Predict Higher Deficit

By Robert A. Rosenblatt: Los Angeles Times Service ...

WASHINGTON - The Social Security system faces a bigger increase than previously anticipated in its deficit over the next 75 years because higher unemployment and a lower birth rate will reduce the imount of taxes flowing into the retirement fund, according to the Social Security Administration.

The prospect of a bigger deficit, announced Friday, is certain to intensify the congressional debate over the best way to ensure that to day's young workers will receive Social Security checks when they

These seemingly insignificant changes can translate into billions of dollars over 75 years. The actuaries did not provide a dollar number, but congressional sources said the new assumptions would add roughly $150 billion to a longrun system deficit already estimated at $1.6 trillion.

About two-thirds of the gap could be closed under a plan being considered by Congress to raise payroll taxes, delay the annual construction, aluminum, and acrocost-of-living increase for six space industries, communications and electrical workers in the teletaxes on some Social Security benefits. Social Security.

The Helms plan would make a 20-year transition to a private retirement program through special tax-free savings accounts.

Starting in 1984, a worker would receive a 20-percent credit against federal income taxes for money deposited into such an account. The maximum credit would be equal to 20 percent of the Social Security taxes paid that year. In return for the tax break, the worker would agree to accept a smaller Social Security check in the future.

A person who look the maximum tax break for 20 years would give up all claim to a Social Security check. Mr. Helms said the taxfree earnings of the account would

Survey Finds Fewer Now Believe Their Children Will Be Better Off

By Barry Sussman Vashington Post Service

WASHINGTON - Americans have begun to lose faith in an idea that is as old as the republic: that their children will be materially better off than they are.

Nothing has been more a part of the American dream than the belief that hard work and struggle will result in rewards for future genera-

But in hardly more than three years, that belief appears to have been dashed and in its place a philosophy of lowered expectations is taking hold.

According to findings of a Washington Post-ABC News poll in January, fewer people each year expect their children to do better financially than they have done. and more expect them to do worse.

The question was: "Thinking of your children when they get to be your age, would you say they will be better off financially than you are now, not as well off, or what?" Forty-four percent took the optimistic view toward their children's lot, but 38 percent were pessimis-tic. Among blacks, only 34 percent expected their children to be better off, while 55 percent expected them to be worse off In November 1979, when the poll first asked the question of a national random sample, inflation, running at an annual rate of about 18 percent, was the dominant problem and had been for a long time. Interest rates were the highest in modern times, at 15 percent or

The notion that things had turned sour was widespread; the economy had already surfaced as the No. 1 issue in the coming presidential campaign. Despite those problems, 60 percent of those interviewed in 1979 felt their children would be better off financially. Only 9 percent ex-pected their children to be worse

Among black families, with many still in the process of entering the mainstream, enthusiasm was even greater: 74 percent said their children would be better off. Only 8 percent said their children would not be as well off.

In March 1982, when the question was asked again, interest rates were about the same, but the inflation rate had been cut by more than half.

Bailing Out the World

Though it saw no great problem only-months ago, the Reagan administration now urges Congress quickly to authorize a large in-crease in the U.S. subscription to the Interna-tional Monetary Fund. This change of heart has led to accusations that the measure is just a bailout for big banks that lent recklessly.

Certainly, if it works, it will help the banks in the long run. But it will also help the world, bolstering troubled countries that could pull everyone down. Banks will still hold large loans; indeed, they will have been pushed by the IMF and Washington into lending more when they might rather get out.

The IMF's governors have agreed to enlarge the pool of currencies for loans to nations unable in meet debt payments, like Mexico, Argentina and Brazil. If IMF members approve. resources will rise by almost half, to $90 billion. A supplementary fund, financed by the strongest countries, will more than double, to $19 billion. Of the overall increase, the United States's pledged share is about a fifth.

Given high unemployment and severe budget cuts, some members of Congress are understandably reluctant to let the Treasury borrow billions more so the IMF can lend more to foreigners. They are not assuaged by the fact that this subscription does not count as "spending." Nor are they moved by the fact that the United States, though the biggest pro-vider for the fund, has also been one of the biggest borrowers.

Foreign aid measures get a flinty eye on Capitol Hill, and this one is further tinged by a suspicion that banks should suffer for imprudent loans. It is clear now that bankers have indeed been too enthusiastic about loans to foreign governments. Even last summer, they still saw Mexico as a good risk. These misjudgments prompt demands that banks be more tightly limited in their foreign activity.

The banks, startled to learn how much debt their borrowers had accumulated, have formed a private agency to improve their data on foreign economic and financial conditions. That has not, however, satisfied their critics.

Some Congressmen would limit loans to any one country, though it is hard to see how U.S. law could control anything as fluid as international credit. (The Federal Reserve chairman, Paul Volcker, leans to having the IMF do it.) Others would limit each bank's foreign landing to require lander programs. foreign lending or require larger reserves for foreign loans. There are also efforts to make the banks pay for the IMF authorization by supporting other legislation they oppose.

Treasury Secretary Donald Regan pot more pressure on the banks when he endorsed tighter regulation of foreign lending and sugsted that banks were keeping interest rates high to cover their foreign losses.

Better supervision is certainly desirable. But whatever the deal, it should not be allowed to block the IMF expansion.

Without expansion more banks, not fewer, would have to be bailed out as more foreign loans go sour. The fund has done commendable work in coping with the debt problem and insisting that the banks increase their loan commitments until conditions improve. The debt crisis will not pass until the world resumes sustainable growth. The fund's enlargement is a sensible tool both for present conditions and for the future.

The Wages of Zealotry

President Ronald Reagan's firing of Rita La-velle has thrown the Environmental Protection Agency into crisis. But the cause of the crisis goes far beyond the current turmoil, ft dates to the decision two years ago to appoint James Wait as secretary of the interior and Anne Gorsuch as head of the EPA: Mr. Reagan thereby entrusted stewardship of the nation's environment to two people fundamentally op-posed to the legal missions of their agencies.

Unable to get Congress to change the laws, they have pursued their ends by other means. Mrs. Gorsuch has undermined the EPA by halving its budget when its responsibilities are doubling. She has induced many of its best professional staff to quit, and has sabotaged the agency's enforcement effort by continual reorganizations and cutbacks. She has scrimped on the science and monitoring that must underlie effective regulation.

Mr. Watt said recently he intended to "cannibalize" the National Park Service by transferring its officials elsewhere. While in-timidating the professional staff at his department, he has tried repeatedly by administrative fiat, in defiance of Congress, to open wilderness to exploiters and to bar new additions to the wilderness system.

Mr. Watt and Mrs. Gorsuch are zealots. bent on hacking down environmental laws that seem to infringe oo industrial activity. That is a far cry from how true conservatives might have changed government's environmental policy: by seeking to substitute economic incentives for direct regulation.

That is why conservatives, too, are alarmed by the administration's management of environmental law and why many members of Congress have come to mistrust every executive action. And that is why Mrs. Gorsuch's mismanagement has given Mr. Reagan such an intense, immediate problem.

Congress suspects that Rita Lavelle, the oow fired head of the Superfund program to elcan up old toxic waste dumps, made "sweetheart" deals with polluters. Mr. Reagan as-serts the EPA's "splendid record" over the last two years is being overlooked in the flurry of accusations. Even if these all prove false, the record is anything but splendid.

In the very first Superfund settlement, with the Inmont Corp. of Los Angeles, Mrs. Gorsuch's assistant, Thornton Field, undercut the EPA by informing the company of the agency's bottom-line negotiating position. Though he admitted doing so to a House committee last April, he still works for the EPA, in its enforcement office.

Another of Mrs. Gorsuch's aides, James Sanderson, was cominated assistant administrator for policy but had to withdraw last June. The Justice Department, in a still pending inquiry, began looking into charges that he had continued to represent one of his law firm's clients, the Denver Water Board, after joining the agency.

Mrs. Gorsuch herself is no slouch at granting private favors. When representatives of the Thriftway company of New Mexico came seeking a waiver from the laws limiting lead in gasoline, she drew aside the Senate aide who escorted them, saying "that she couldn't tell the Thriftway representatives to break the law but she hoped that they got the message." the aide says in an affidavit.

Miss Lavelle's calendars, full of lunch dates with industry representatives, demonstrate how ooe-sided ber interests have been. The EPA under Mrs. Gorsuch has acquired the reputation of favoritism to anyone who finds environmental law an impediment. Nothing could so blacken industry's public image, or and Mrs. Gorsuch crode and maneuver around the laws that protect the nation's air. water and wildernesses. He has only himself to blame that the results are now being dumped at the White House gate.

On Oil Prices

The proposed $3 cut in the price of a barrel of BNOC [British National Oil Corp.] crude is already being beralded as the breakout before the final collapse of the oil prices and the OPEC cartel: But such a conclusion is markedly premature. The current downward pressure on prices is being led by the rundown of oil stocks internationally, and a slowdown or even a full reversal of that tendency as soon as the oil companies expect prices to rise will fum the market very quickly.

The 20-percent margin of OPEC spare ca-pacity may mean that the developed countries can now embark on a couple of years of reasonable growth without fear of rekindling another oil price shock. But the recent weakness of oil prices, which reflects the West's recession, does nothing to alter the likelihood that the real price of a dwindling resource like oil is in the long run bound to increase.

There is still far too much whooping and cheering about the beneficial effects of falling

Was Bush Too Adept In Europe?

By Michael Getler

WASHINGTON — Vice President George Bush's trip through Europe this month to rally support for President Ronald Reagan's arms-control proposals proved much about Mr. Bush, but not much about whether the world is heading for arms control or a prolonged arms race.

The vice president carried off a tricky assignment for the president at a particularly sensitive time in U.S.-European relations. That can only help Mr. Bush inside the administration - and could conceivably enhance his political future.

Mr. Reagan is known as "the great communicator," but his specialty is set-piece speeches. Mr. Bush, in news conferences in seven European capi-tals, showed himself to he better than his boss at dealing with complicated and sensitive questions about atomic weapons — the kinds of questions that have tripped up Mr. Reagan. The vice president was quick and ar-ticulate in handling or avoiding questions whose answers can cause bigger and more damaging headlines in a nuclear-sensitized European press than most Americans realize.

West Europeans are used to parliamentary systems where government leaders must be prepared to respond instantaneously in colleagues' questions without a prepared text in front of them. It is a system that requires leaders to demonstrate a mastery of issues. By demonstrating a comparable talent in his appearances in Europe, Mr. Bush no doubt reassured Europeans while enhancing the image of the administration.

"The flying ambassador," as Italy's influential, left-of-center newspaper La Repubblica put it, "is not ob-scured by the president's shadow." In London's ancient Guild Hall,

Mr. Bush drew applause from a large audience after he asked a challenger from England's leading disarmament organization: "Do yon think we don't want peace? Do yon think we care less than others about ouclear war?" Mr. Bush's point, made succinctly and effectively, was that military balance, even if it meant lots of weapons, was one way to keep the peace and that such a view did not mean that those who support it are unconcerned about ouclear war.

So in public, Mr. Bush played the role of an effective public relations man for the Reagan administration, There is also reason to believe he handled himself well in his private meetings with European leaders.

Mr. Bush was sent to Europe mostly to listen to what allied leaders had to say about the vexing and politically explosive problem of trying to limit the deployments of medium-range nuclear missiles.

From whal can be learned about se confidential talks, Mr. Bush did mostly listen, and the Europeans did oot have too much specific to say. In effect, he did not try to pry out of the Europeans the kind of message that might have put a lot of immediate pressure on Mr. Reagan to change his position in the deadlocked arms talks with the Russians at Geneva.

That Reagan position, the socalled zero option, calls for the Russians to dismantle all 600 or so of

The Russians have rejected this, and there seems no chance they will ever accept it. Everybody in Europe knows this, and knows that only a compromise agreement is feasible.

This fundamental fact of diplomatic life leads to the paradox of the Bush trip tn Europe: Because it was successful as a public-relations venture, it could wind up making an agreement with the Russians even they bave done a very good job.

So it was part of Mr. Bush's assignment in Europe to refurbish the image of "morality and the basic soundness" of the zero option. By succeed-ing in doing just that, Mr. Bush probably postponed the moment when because of mounting political pres-sures in Western Europe and the United States — Washington will feel compelled to move toward a genuine moment, but it remains in the offing. That is the Reagan administration's

Guessing Reagan's Intentions WASHINGTON — The most

By James Reston

Popular game in the capital of the Umited States these days is "Will He or Won't He" run for a second term in the White House. It is popular because it takes everybody's mind off more important problems. And the best player in this political game is the president himself. He loves it. He may not be a great president, but he is a great performer. He told the Conservative Political Action Conference here recently that "our clean-up crew will need more than two years to deal with the mess left by others over a half-century."

This was taken by his conservative andience and others as an indication that be intended to run again for a second term, but he didn't say "T" oced "more than two years" to clean up the "mess." He just tossed it off as usual with a smile and an amiable wave of his hand, and left them to guess what be meant.

The chances are that he dida't mean anything except to hold his party together, and make them won-der, from right to left, what he will do, and keep them in line while he waits to see how his economic and foreign policies work in the next six months. Nobody can blame him. The objective of the Republican Party, including the extreme conserv-atives, who regret his recent pragmatic compromises with the Democrats, to retain cootrol of the White House for the next six years. This is, and always has been, the main purpose of political parties: to hold executive power for themselves.

So President Reagan's friends are telling him that their main hope of getting rid of the "Democratic mess" is not to leave it to a divided Republican Party, but to command the con-flict by running again himself.

No matter bow much Mr. Reagan may long for home or retirement, they insist, he must go on for another four years. Otherwise, the Republi-

The Debt Problem Regarding "U.S. Bailout of Bankers Is Necessity" (IHT, Feb. 4):

Robert J. Samuelson's article seems to me to stand the international debt problem on its head. The right question might be: Why were Mexico, Brazil, Argentina, Yugoslaviz and others loaned more debt than they could handle?

Yes, a significant write-off of these debts would damage many of the largest banks and impair their ability to continue their lending both home and abroad. But that is their stockbolders' risk — not the taxpayers'! I see no massive propaganda by the banks to protect the mortgages of Americans now imable to make their payments. Maybe it's a bit harder to repossess Poland?

The banks were not operating under self-deception and f blame them exclusively for today's debt problem. The context in which they operated fractional reserve banking system, passed unwittingly by a Congress that wanted to be home for Christmas in 1913. When you can loan out $100 for every $10 you have in the vault and charge interest on the $90 tively, make some American particiyou don't have, you've got a good thing going, fullation was created when the reserve requirements were out by two American delegates, Nor-lowered. Now the bankers can loan out the same $100 for only every $9 or $8 in their banks, resulting in more money chasing goods — an economist's description of inflation. When Thomas Jefferson said,

The only thing I fear more than banks, is a standing army," he had cause. Jefferson taxed the living, not their great- grandchildren. Each genera-tion must pay its own debt. And not JOHN SHERIDAN.

Mend's book, "Coming of Age in Samoa," was based on data from the 1920s. Freeman's book is based on data from, at the earliest, 1940. In response to Jamshid Moshiri's disdain for "Peanuts." I offer the following explanation, not to be confused with apologia: "Peanuts" is neither subtle nor satire. For that we have had until recently "Dooneshury" (which provided an acerbic but humorous look at the pretensions of almost everyone),

"Peanuts" is simply an unsophisticated, uncomplicated way of looking at the world through the eyes of children. It is a refreshing (to my mind) way of looking nostalgically back on the days before P- we all became corrupted by the world of adults. It is strictly a West European, and more appropriately, American type of humor that has little in common with the more intricate way of looking at life characteristic of the Arabic world.

Eubic Blake was a great entertainer, but he would never have claimed, as the reporter suggests. that he and his partner Noble Sissle were the first black vaudeville act to play and be a hit before white audiences, which up to 1919 were accustomed to burnt-cork

Eubie would be the first to know that that honor belongs to Bert that six minutes is enough for a Williams, who as early as 1900 was a great stage favorite, doing come-dy and song and dance with George Walker, his vaudeville part-all, what befell Romeo and Juliet ner; they composed songs as well. Show business historians like Joe messages. Laurie Jr. cite Bert Williams as being one of the most gifted and famous black performers. He was also a star of the Ziegfeld Follies during World War I, the only black man in the show.

Other teams that predated Eubic were Cole & Johnson, a hit act of 1909, and Johnson & Dean, who introduced the cakewalk.

Ex-Ruling Party Of Spain, UCD, Dissolves Itself

MADRID - The Union of the Democratie Center (UCD), the center-right party that successfully after Franco's death and then governed the country for five years, has formally dissolved itself.

Officials said the decision was made Friday night at a meeting of the party's executive committee after the resignation of Landelino Lavilla as party leader. The party has been placed in the hands of a caretaker commission, which will lonk after the party's economic and administrative affairs until its legal dissolution in June, officials said.

The party was formed out of a loose alliance of former Franco supporters, including Christian Democrats, Liberals, Social Democrats and Independents. Under Adolfo Suarez, its first leader, the party won the first post-Franco elections in 1977 and was re-elected two years later. But then party factions began to squabble, with Mr. Suárez resigning in 1981 as prime minister and later as party

The concert at New York's Lincoin Center was broadcast live by satellite around the world. And on Friday, Chile's national television station published announcements that it would carry the broadcast.

"The program includes scene interviews and the thoughts of the greatest interpreter of piano music of the 20th century," the announce ment said. But on Saturday, the government-owned station canceled the broadcast without explanation. Television sources said the prohibition was ordered by the office of the secretary-general of the presi-dency, which controls information policy and exercises consorship.

The reason appears to be that Mr. Arran, who was 80 on Feb. 6, has refused to play here over the past nine years of military rule. Two weeks ago, El Mercurio, Chile's leading newspaper, devoted its Sunday arts and letters section to a tribute to Mr. Arrau as a concert artist. On Saturday the paper limited its notice of the New York concert to a paragraph, saying that Mr. Arran would play Beethoven, Chapin, Liszt and Debussy.

"It's like a hotel," said Chui Yupun, 64, the caretaker of what is known here as Coffin Home, which consists of three main buildings.

Coffin Home was built in 1899 for "people who prefer to have their relatives buried in their native place," said Peter Ho, a spokesman for the Tung Wah group of hospitals, which owns the coffin reposi-tory. Hospital officials say it is the only place of its kind in Hong

The Chinese have a saving that the most important thing in life is to be buried properly. For many that means being buried in one's ancestral homeland in a place that possesses favorable fengshui.

Fengshui, which means "wind and water," are the unwritten spiritual laws that guide yin and yang, the female-passive and male-active elements in nature.

This British colony, where 98 percent of the nearly 5.5 million people are Chinese, is one of the world's largest and most efficient financial centers, brimming with the latest in computer technology. Still, it has not altogether abandoned certain ancient customs that Westerners often call superstitions but that Chinese regard as wellfounded beliefs.

For instance, construction does not begin on a skyscraper until a mystic has determined that the time is right and the placement of the proposed building is propi-

Volcker Calms Market's Worries: Siemens' Bond Settles After Surge

PARIS — Worries that U.S. interest rates are headed higher evaporated last week after Federal Parent Parish Change and Ch A ed last week after Federal Reserve Board Chairman Paul A. Volcker assured Congress that he would not allow rising rates to abort the long awaited U.S. economic recovery.

This improved the mood of the Eurobond market, but did not result in This improved the mood of the Eurobond market, but did not result in any dramatic changes. Investors, who all along have been nibbling at high yielding bonds in the secondary market, continued to look for hargains. But there was no belter-skelter rush to buy just anything.

Borrowers remained relaxed, confident that they need not rush to market with new issues now but can wait to sell paper later at rates likely to be lower than those prevailing today.

And bankers still sitting on piles of unsold partially paid issues bearing aggressively low coupons were in no rush to unload their holdings. To do that would mean recording an actual loss. Holding that inventory is a profitable exercise and, confident that the market will move lower, bankers are content to sit on the paper and wait until they can sell their holdings at no loss. Some analysis question whether that will ever happen, even if interest rates do move lower. They argue that because the partially paid issues have not been placed, the paper will never find appeal with insututional investors who put a high premium on buying issues that can be easily traded. And issues not well placed are not easily traded.

The undisputed highlight of last week was the market's ravenous appetite for equity-linked issues. Siemens came to market with $250 million of seven-year bonds bearing warrants to buy nine shares of Eurocleor 12,454.5 12,519.5 935.0 common stock. The warrants themselves are 300d for an unusually long seven years. The price at which the stock can be bought, 265 Deutsche marks, was set at a 1.5-percent discount from the actual price of the shares, which were quoted at 269 DM on the date of offer.

in return : :: ais bargain stock price, Siemens was able to put a low coupon of 72. A reent on its fixed-rate bond. In fact, only $200 million of the issue was actually syndicated, as $50 million was placed with one institutional avestor outside West Germany.

The bonds issued at par and trading on a when-issued basis, soared to a 10-percent pro nium before settling back to a premium of 4½ percent at

No on: in pws whether the stories were true about one or more dealers being board shoring this issue (selling paper they did not own on the experiment on they could buy it more cheaply in the secondary market). But one necessary in the meteoric rise was that the shorts trying to buy he k the regardons were pushing the price up.

The second was that the price was pulled up as the share price see. stolk ended the week quoted at 274 DM, enhancing the value rrartis. The stock price, analysts noted, was somewhat inflated ides, payment of a dividend of E DM. When the stock goes ex-March 24, they noted, the stock price can be expected to

The ter blow-out was KLM's 100-million-guilder issue, bearing war-ats out four shares of its stock. The issue is technically a domestic ilde: "If even though foreign underwriters will take 40 percent of the ue, Ki 11's 10-year bonds, bearing an indicated coupon of 7 percent I cu iss as price of par, were quoted on a when issue basis at 108%.

Given it is success, managers do not exclude the possibility that the - the issue price could be altered when final conditions are set Feb. 24. 3 f exercised before May 31, the warrant will enable holders to buy the first shares at a discount, which will be set Feb. 24. But holders have the option of exchanging that warrant for one that is exercisable from new. June 1 through June 15, 1928. In that case, the exercise price sill be set at a premium over the Feb. 23 quote.

Both assues demonstrate that investors want to buy equity linked paper. Bus bankers one that there is little likelihood of U.S. companies using this method to raise money here. For openers, they say, U.S. stock prices thre rising and most companies are reluctant to make an equity offer out of fear that they will be giving the stock away too cheaply.

But shose U.S. companies who are willing to offer equity prefer to issue is the domestic market, where the conversion premium to huy the set at 20 percent or more over the current price. The m convention premium that can be sold to Eurobond investors has generally before in the range of 15 percent.

One delayed benefit from lower oil prices is likely to be a decline in interest rates, Mr. Jones said. Be-cause West Germany and Japan are much more dependent on oil imports than is the United States, lower oil costs give a bigger boost to their economies. That boost should cause the dollar to fall fast-turn, would allow central banks to push down interest rates without

This is the floor of the official Kuwait Stock Exchange, which the Kuwaiti government bailed out in 1978. Now the unofficial exchange is to get similar help from the government.

Kuwaiti Government Again Going To the Rescue of a Stock Market

They were the inner ring of billionaire dealers on Kuwait's notorious souk al-manakh — the unregulated stock market that collapsed last summer. The most magnificent of the nine was Jassim al-

Mutawa, a tubby, mustachioed former immigration clerk. He owes a staggering $10.5 billion for personal checks that he issued to buy stock traded on the exchange. The checks were no good.

Altogether, the Magnificent Nine are believed to account for two-thirds of the $94 billion in postdated checks that proved worthless when the market crashed But stock markets in Kuwait, it seems, have led a charmed life — when they rise, investors reap profits; when they fall, the government picks up the tab. This one promises to be no different. Despite the decline of oil revenues in Kuwait, the government is putting the final touches on a big bailout plan.

The souk al-manakh dealt in the shares of companies that were organized in other Gulf states, usually by Kuwaiti entrepreneurs, but failed to qualify for listing on Kuwait's official stock exchange.

The market dominated by the Magnificent Nine certainly was no place for widows and orphans. Speculators bought big blocks of shares at a premium against postdated checks, hoping to resell at a profit before the checks were presented for payment. For a while, this system yielded fabulous profits for some Speculators swarmed into Kuwait from Lebanon and Saudi Arabia, their suitcases said to be stuffed with money, looking for juicy pickings under the parking garage. Private fortunes that had been conservatively invested abroad were brought home to Knwait in hopes of making a killing.

"Even last year's yields could not compete with the al-manakh," said Hanzar Abbas, governor of Kuwair's central bank. Alarmed by the speculation, the central bank acted to restrict the flow of bank credit into the feverish market. Banks were ordered not to accept postdated checks or stock in Gulf companies as collateral. Banks also were required to raise the proportion of secured loans in their portfolios to 60 percent from 20 percent, thus reducing unsecured personal overdrafts that could be used for speculation. But the system of using postdated checks quickly expanded to fill the void. "Everyone became his own banker," Mr. Abbas

As rumors of the Magnificent Nine's vast financial exposure began to spread, checks were hastily presented for payment. They bounced. The bubble burst, leaving the Kuwaiti government with a problem on its hands—a familiar problem.

Five years earlier, Kuwait's official stock market also had collapsed, threatening an influential segment of the population with minous losses.

The official market has always been highly speculative. Shares of the 46 listed companies now trade at price-carnings ratios as high as 830. In 1978 the government stepped in, setting a floor price for each stock and pledging to buy any that was offered. As a result, (Continued on Page 9, Col.1)

Brazil Devalues Money By 30% Against Dollar

By Warren Hoge New York Times Service RIO DE JANEIRO - Brazil has announced a 30-percent devalua-tion of its currency against the dollar in a move that dramatized the country's continuing difficulty in ending its economic crisis.

The devaluation was announced Saturday and takes effect Monday. When banks open Monday, the cruzeiro will be traded at 379.54 to the dollar to buy and 381.44 to sell. On Friday the figures were 291.95 and 293.41.

The government said just two months ago that devaluation would not be necessary because of other emergency measures that it had adopted. A poor export record in January and a continuing reluctance by foreign banks to make dollars available invalidated that

Although officials tried to portray the devaluation as an indication of the government's serious-ness in addressing its balance-of-payments problems, the decision carried enough hazards for Brazil's stricken economy to suggest that the government was also acting out of desperation.

Prices are expected to rise, particularly on such key imported con-sumer items as gasoline and wheat, further firing an inflation rate that is already at a 12-month level of 105.7 percent a year.

The government promised to re-duce inflation and take other steps to obtain a promise of a $4.9-biltion loan from the International Monetary Fund in December. In the year following the cruzeiro's last major devaluation, a 30-per-cent cut in December 1979, inflation rose to 110 percent from 77

There was even some question over whether the one clear objecover whether the one clear objective of the decision, spurring Brazil's lagging exports, would be met. The government is counting on Brazil's products selling better with the more competitive prices that the devaluation will give them. Some economists contend, however, that the worldwide recession has depressed trade so much that prices alone do not appreciably af-

This, government officials said, provided the principal stimulus for the devaluation. The whole government economic strategy and possibly even the IMF negotiations were in jeopardy, they felt.

The other concern contributing to the devaluation decision was the difficulty that the country was having persuading foreign banks to re-establish credit lines of $7 billion to $10 billion with Brazilian banks

The current guessing is that the shortfall will be swept under the carpet, with everyone attributing it to misunderstandings between the banks and Brazilian authorities over the actual size of the outstanding lines last June rather than an outright unwillingness to comply with the target.

There is some truth to this. The data of the commercial banks and the Brazilian authorities often do oot agree. But speaking privately, bankers admit that is not the ma reason holding back this part of the operation.

new issues coming on offer, but they generated little excitement.

Skandinaviska Enskilda Banken's $100-million, five-year offering, carrying a coupon of 11½ per-cent and open pricing was disap-pointing, many dealers said, be-cause high-quality Swedish paper can be bought in the secondary market yielding 12 percent.

Dealers said the terms on Mitsabishi Estate's $50-million, five-year notes were much more realistic carrying a coupon of 11% percent and priced at par.

Terms on the $100-million, 10year offering for SNCF, the French railway, were deemed acceptable if unexciting with a coupon of 11½ percent and an issue price of 99% to yield 11.54 percent.

A $200-million floating rate oote for CEPME, the French credit agency for small- and mediumsized companies, introduced a new wrinkle into the market. The floater is traditional, paying a

An opportunistic Irish try then set off spontaneous chanting of "Molly Malone," which is saddor even than the Welsh crowd's famous "Sospan Fach" but can be just as triumphant it swelled around the ecstatic stadium, from section to section in accidental polyphony, and so sweet was the cresdo to Campbell that be kicked his fourth penalty.

A Dublin commentator, Karl

ohnston, summed up Sunday:
The better team lost, somebody remarked in the aftermath of this extraordinarily thrilling game. Per-haps so; but if France looked the freland owed much to Fitzgerald's shrewd captaincy — he paced his veteran forwards firmly — and to the tactical control of its halfbacks, 5-foot-9 Robbie McGrath and Campbell, the cool flyhalf whose 14 points took his career to-tal to an Irish record of 169. But it was neatly timed bursts of forward and fierce - that decided it.

Willie Duggan (6-foot-3, 226 pounds, 33 next month) is a wellknown character in world rugby: cuming and hard, fond of beer and unfond of training. He slouched out last for the team picture. He trotted out a distant last when the team took the field. But when it most mattered, Ireland's No. 8 sprinted 60 meters and was the first forward there.

That was 27 minutes into the second half, when France was attacking to pad its one-point lead. Blanco had just missed with a drop. Center Christian Belascain lost the ball, Irish fullback Hugo MacNeill gave it a whack with his right foot and MacNeill and French right wing Philippe Sella chased it upfield.

Sella, 21 since last Monday, waited too long to accelerate, un-derestimating MacNeill's speed; then the Frenchman won the race but tried to play the ball instead of kicking it safely out of play. "I was counting on support," he said later. Instead he got MacNeill - and Duggan. From that platform, as more Irishmen streamed up, it was easy to put left wing Moss Finn over for his and Ireland's second

In between he disallowed two debatable tries by left wing Patrick Estève and gener ally gave the French the impression that they almost alone could be caught offside. MacNeill was also in on Finn's first try, which Campbell conven-ed. In France's second-half comeback, Blanco kicked ahead and got a try (making him the first fullback in French history with three career tries) that he converted; and both French wings touched down for a try from another kick-ahead. Esteve getting the credit.

Fitzgerald's pack started at top speed, bent on avenging the 22-9 defeat in Paris that deprived them of the grand slam last year. He ex-pected to take the lead and then have to cope with a French comeback. But how did he feel when France went ahead? "I felt the match was finally starting."

The new-look Welsh pack gave the match a fiery start, and it was new prop Staff Jones, plowing through Scottish forwards after a break around the front of a lineout by scrumhalf Terry Holmes, who got the first of the match's three tries in the 17th minute. Fullback Mark Wyatt, who had already put Wales ahead for good with the first of his three penalty goals, converted, then matched two penalties by Scottish fullback Peter Dods to make the halftime score 15-6.

In the second half Dods narrowed the gap with his third penalty, but a corner-to-corner try completed by Elgan Rees brought the crowd to its feet and the score to 19-9. From deep in Welsh territory flyhalf Malcolm Dacey launched left wing Clive Rees, sidestepping, down the left. # UNLV, the Pols and the Polls

By George Vecsey New York Times Service

NEW YORK - Has anybody considered that Jerry Tarkanian: four coaching friends did him a service by omitting his University of Nevada-Las Vegas team from their United Press International ballots last week?

The omission seems so obvious that one is almost tempted to suspect the four other coaches of doing a favor for Tarkanian. By not ranking undefeated

UNLV among the top 15 schools. the four coaches supplied Tarkanian with halftime speeches to last him to the National Collegiate Athletic Association tournament - when polls and ratings will be relegated to their true, minimal, importance.

Valenzuela Wins Pact of $1 Million

The Associated Press LOS ANGELES - Los Angeles Dodger pitcher Fernando Valen-zuela has a record SI million, oneyear contract thanks to the stroke of an arbitrator's pen. Valenzuela played last year without a contract following a wrangle with Dodger management. The 22-year-old left-hander, who in 1981 became the first National Leaguer ever to win rookie of the year honors along with the Cy Young Award, was signed Saturday after two days' binding arbitration held by arbitrator Tom Roberts.

Both sides had submitted signed blank contracts, and Roberts filled in the amount. The Dodgers had offered Valenzuela $750,000, while the pitcher had asked for $1 million. The settlement eclipses the $700,000 awarded to Chicago Cub pitcher Bruce Sutter in 1980, which had been the largest-ever arbitration contract

Valenzuela, a native of Mexico, struck out 199 batters in 1982 and had four shutouts among his 18 complete games while compiling a 19-13 record and a 2.88 earned-run average. Some people have seen the omis-sion of UNLV as a stuffy, spiteful act by members of the college basketball establishment, who resent the undefeated record (24-0) of a school in a gambling town that plays in a nonestablishment conference, the Pacific Coast Athletic Association.

By neglecting to mention UNLV, the gang of four - who bave been identified as Lou Carnesecca of St. John's, Digger Phelps of Notre Dame, Marv Harshman of Washington and Stan Morrision of Southern California - kept the Runnin' Rebels from being first in the UPI poll. By contrast, those paragons of impartiality, the sports reporters and broadcasters who vote in The Associated Press poll, ranked UNLY first

The truth is, there are too many polls of all kinds; there are too many presidential polls - every years, some people sit around and decide how they are going to vote, based upon the polls. If the UNLV players think they're No. 1, they shouldn't need the approval from a coaches' poll.

As they undoubtedly learned in So-ciology L it's better to be inner-di-rected than outer-directed. Besides, college coaches have been shading their opinions for years. Most football coaches predict their own doom, week after

It seems the establishment resents Tarkanian's platoons of junior college imports and transfers, his pipeline to the school yards of New York and Los Angeles, his background of recruiting violations at Long Beach State and UNLV and his 344-83 won-lost record in college coaching, the best. ratio in his business.

LANGUAGE The Acid-Rain Test

NEW YORK - "The Soviet army." wrote Zbigniew Brzezinski in The New York Times, "has not hesitated to engage in chemical warfare, 'acid rain,' against the Afghan freedom fight-

No. A confusion has arisen between acid rain and yellow rain that threatens to wash away meaning.

Acid rain is rainfall that has been polluted by chemicals, usually sul-fur and nitrogen oxides, which in raindrops become sulfuric and mitric acid. The Barnhart Dictionary of New English has the earliest ci-tation, in a May 23, 1975 article by Boyce Rensberger of The New York Times: "Scandinavian and American researchers suspect that acid rains have killed fish in many lakes in both regions."

Yellow rain, though it falls, or rains down, from the sky, is oot a type of rain. David Guralnik of Webster's New World Dictionary defines it as "a form of chemical warfare where wxins are sprayed from planes or dropped as bombs in the form of a yellowish powder. The toxins, T2 and trichothecene, are fungal."

"Our nutritionists and geneti-cists prefer raise," admits Chris Whaley, who scratches around for a living at Perdue, "but our housing people prefer grow. We contract people to raise our chickens for us after we have hatched the eggs and the chickens are a couple of days old; we ship them to these people, who own their own farms, and they are called growers."

chicken is out of the ordinary and not proper," he says, refusing to cluck sympathetically. "You grow trees and lima beans. You let the chickens grow for themselves." He added the classic differentiation in the viability game: "You raise cal-tle, rear children and grow things in your garden. Let's keep them sepa-

That's an admirably clear posithat's an admirably clear posi-tion, but I have long ago caved in on the raise-rear issue. Raise, in the sense of bringing up children, bas a two-century lineage, and was espe-cially fostered in Canada: Thomas Haliburton, in "The Clockmaker" in 1837, had a Canadian character say, "I don't know as ever I felt so ugly afore since I was raised."

There is an essential insult, however, in applying grow to animals; it is as if to say they were oo differ-ent from a crop of alfalfa.

WHEN Elizabeth Dole, the new U.S. transportation secretary, was working in the White House a year ago, reports flew about Washington that she was West Wing window dressing, less than influen-tial. At the time, James Baker, the chief of staff, scoffed at those reports in this way: "Elizabeth Dole has one of the toughest jobs here. She has excellent political judgment and is extremely bright.

He meant well. To many people, bright is a compliment when applied to a person, a synonym for 'smart, clever, mentally quick."
But as used today, bright has a connotation that dictionaries have not yet caught. When you are asked to say something nice about a fellow who is oot brilliant, you call him "bright"; it is an almostcompliment that says more about what it fails to say than what it says. When applied to a child, the word is unfailingly upbeat - everyone wants to have a bright child, eager and able to learn but when applied to an adult, bright carries a subtle put-down.

The meaning is "less thoughtful than intelligent," "far less profound than wise" and, as ooted above, "less bright than brilliant," To have the smarts is to possess an innate feel for what is the profitable thing to do, but to be bright is to stand there with eyes wide, tail wagging, bead cocked alertly, awaiting the New York Times Service

His Conducting and His Private Life Are Both Very Upbeat

By Mary MacVean The Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — Through a L career spanning classical, jazz and movie music, André Previn has emerged as a world-class celebrity who at 53 says he has found personal and professional

Previn is music director of the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra, conductor emeritus of the London Symphony, a composer and pianist who, with his fourth wife, divides his time between the two cities. He has tasted fame as a Hollywood boy-wonder, gossip-column notoriety as the husband of actress Mia Farrow, and has struggled to prove himself in the "serious" world of conducting. Now, Previn says, he is happier

"Oh yes, easily, because both my personal life and my professional life seem to be happy and ordered and permanent," he says. In the past, he adds, "one or the other has always been danger-

The Pittsburgh Symphony is highly regarded, and under Pre-vin's direction has toured much of the Western world and ventured into the recording studio. The maestro has about 150 recordings to his credit.

In 1976, when Previn came to Pittsburgh, he described his musicians as a font away from greatoess. Now, he says, they are 11 inches closer, and "played like angels" on a recent European Previn's blue eyes sparkle be-hind dark-framed glasses, his speech is neither quite American oor quite British. He smokes cigarettes and speaks softly, with a casual grace and the sweeping gestures one might expect from an orchestra conductor.

"I can't tell you whether it was the second day or the first day or the 15th day, but I know that very early on I knew that is what I wanted to do with my life," be says 22 years after becoming a

Born in Berlin in 1929, the son of a lawyer and avid amateur mu-sician, Previn began music studies at the age of 6. In 1939, his Jewish family fled Nazi Germany and, after a period in Paris where he attended the Conservatoire, moved eventually to Los Angeles where Previn's uncle was head of the music department at Univer-sal Studios. As a teen-ager, Pre-vin continued classical studies, but began writing music for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

His first score accompanied a Lassie movie, and he went on to win four Academy Awards and 14 cominations, an accomplishment Previn oow says "taught me a great deal — but 1 should have gotten out a little earlier." While in the army in San Francisco. Previn studied conducting under Pierre Monteux. But throughout the 1950s, he worked in Hollywood and as a jazz pia-nist. In 1960, he began his conducting career in earnest.

By Andrew Clark onal Herald Tribune MUNICH — Major develop-ments within Munich's three principal musical institutions have given fresh impetus to the city's cultural life, opening a debate on the priorioes of artistic policy in the Bavarian capital. The most concrete development is taking place over by the Deutsches Museum, Mild winter weather has allowed work to prog-ress quickly on the new Philharmonie, a grandiose arts complex that has far exceeded the original plan to provide a home for the Munich Philharmonic Orchestra. But the 2,500-seat concert hall, to be finished in all-wood surfaces, remains at the center of the project that has been seen as Munich's attempt to upstage Berlin.

Whether the new building can rival acoustically the home of the Berlin Philharmonic, or open on schedule in September 1985, no one is yet prepared to wager. Cer-tainly the Munich Philharmonic has none of the majestic sound quality of Herbert von Karajan's orchestra, in spite of improvements made by its latest conductor, the 70-year old Romanian-born Sergin Celibidache.

Celibidache, who conducted the Berlin orchestra after World War II until the reinstatement of Wilhelm Furtwängler, regularly draws full houses for his carefully built interpretations of the late Romantics. This year he engineered a 25 percent increase in the orchestra's public subsidy, making it one of the largest and best-paid in Europe, and giving its concerts an in-ternational television audience.

Of the city's five full-time orchestras — the Philharmonic, two for opera and two for radio --the Bavarian Radio Orchestra continues to be the most adventurous. Its new chief conductor, Sir Colin Davis, who is also music director at Covent Garden and a regular guest with the Boston Symphony, made his debut here recently in two concerts featuring Stravinsky's "Oedipus Rex" that augured well for the orchestra and the Munich public.

At the Bavarian State Opera, August Everding has just been suc-ceeded as Intendant by Wolfgang Sawallisch, the quiet and serious music director since 1971. Sawalthe less-known German repertoire, score.

Wagner was only 20 when he started work on "Das Liebesverbot," a "grand comic opera." It is loosely based on Shakespeare's "Measure for Measure," set in Wagner's own German doggerel and poured into the mold of Italian opera buffa. The work, though stageworthy and entertaining, is peppered with shallow characters and absurd situations, and offers just a faint foretaste of Wagner's mature style. But it remains of little more than passing curiosity value, adding a human touch to the prevailing depiction of the composer as pure genius.

The Munich production, which stays in repertory through July. makes a persuasive case for the opera, largely through Ponnelle's handling of the material on its own terms, playing up the comedy for all it is worth.
